

DANGER

Why should you be concerned about Covance ?

- History of Federal Violations
- History of Importing Ebola Virus
- History of Deception
- History of Animal Cruelty
- Potential Infectious Diseases
- Potential Toxic Chemicals
- Potential Carcass & Waste Incinerator
- Potential Bio-Hazards

Covance, a multi-million dollar contract lab, plans to build a 400,000 square-foot facility in Chandler. In addition to testing drugs, food additives, cosmetic ingredients, and pesticides on animals, Covance also breeds and sells animals for use in experiments. Misleading animal tests have led to a string of public health disasters. Vioxx, Phenactin, E-Ferol, Oraflex, Zomax, Suprol, and Selacryn are just a few of the drugs in recent years that appeared safe based on animal tests but were pulled from the market for killing or seriously harming thousands of people.

GET THE FACTS ABOUT COVANCE

- Covance is a contract lab – paid to test cosmetic ingredients, additives, pesticides, and drugs on monkeys, dogs, cats, rabbits, rats, and mice.
- Covance was recently fined by the USDA for 16 violations of federal law.
- Covance is the largest importer of primates into the U.S. - more than 12,000 primates in 2005. Monkeys can carry an array of diseases dangerous to humans, e.g. Hepatitis B, shigella, tuberculosis, and Ebola.
- In 1989, Covance (then known as Hazelton) had an Ebola virus outbreak in its Reston, Virginia facility. Hazardous materials experts were brought in to seal off the premises and kill all the animals. Built for $12 million, the blighted facility sat on the market for years, was eventually bulldozed, and the land given away.
- Recent documents uncover a 2006 outbreak of tuberculosis at Covance's Madison facility, a fact which Covance has not shared with Chandler residents, or even with their local community.
